

Air Arabia targets Arab world in services push

AIR ARABIA, the low-cost carrier based in Sharjah, UAE, aims to operate services to all airports in the Arab world, stretching from the Atlantic Ocean to the Indian Ocean, its top official has said.

The airline's chief executive Adel Ali told the Gulf Daily

News (GDN), our sister publication, on the sidelines of the Arab Aviation and Media Summit 2014 in Ras Al Khaimah, UAE, that this was a key goal for the airline that has entered into its second decade of operations.

Air Arabia currently flies to 89 airports across the Middle East, North Africa, Asia and Europe from its four hubs of Sharjah, Alexandria, Casablanca and Ras Al Khaimah, which was launched earlier this year following a long-term strategic partnership with Ras Al Khaimah Department of Civil Aviation. ■
